Drama and Development Education in the Primary Classroom
Book 2 in the Step by Step Series

By Joanna Parkes & Sarah FitzGibbon

"It is a huge pleasure to introduce this excellent set of classroom resources for drama. These materials make important connections between drama as a process for learning and the priorities of Development Education. They are designed to physically, emotionally and cognitively engage children in considering how they might make the world a fairer and more tolerant home for us all."

– Jonathan Neelands (Professor of Drama and Theatre in Education at Warwick University, renowned trainer, workshop leader and author of several influential books, including "Structuring Drama Work")

Step by Step Together is written by two of Ireland's most experienced educational drama practitioners, Joanna Parkes and Sarah FitzGibbon, and contains a new collection of educational drama schemes that have been tried and tested in more than 50 Irish primary classrooms.

This book focuses on using drama to explore development education in the primary classroom. Schemes explore topics such as fair trade and workers' rights, the environment and sustainable development, children's rights, emigration and immigration.

The handbook format allows teachers to easily access drama schemes for each age group and check related curriculum links. The book contains enjoyable schemes for the full range of primary classes and is designed to challenge teachers with new activities and techniques, while at the same time being accessible for teachers who are exploring drama for the first time.

Step by Step Together is published by the National Association For Youth Drama.
